The Illacs in my garden blow.

Wide meadows ring my garden round.
In that green wood wild violets grow
And pale frail cuckoo flowers are found.
For all you see and all you hear
The city might be miles away,
And yet you feel the city near
Through all the quiet of the day.

Sweet smells the earth, new washed with rain.
Wet leaves gleam in the moonlight pale,
And in the wood behind the lane
I hear the hidden nightingale.
Though field and wood about me lie,
Soft hushed in dewy deep delight,
Yet I can hear the city sigh
Through all the silence of the night.

For me the skylark nests and sings;
For me the vine her garland weaves;
The swallow folds her glossy wings
:To build beneath my cottage caves.
But I can feel the giant near.
Can hear all day his sad slaves weep,
And when at last the night is here
I hear him moving in his sleep.

I hear him moving in ms siect.

Oh, for a little space of ground,
Though never a flower should make it gay,
Where miles of meadow lapped me round
And leagues and leagues of silence lay!
Oh, for a wind lashed, treeless down,
A black night and a lonely way,
A silence deep enough to drown
The voice that mocks me night and day!

CHINESE GORDON.

The Famous Englishman's Resignation and Prophetic Message to the Khedive

A correspondent writing to The Scot-tish American says: One chilly morning at Suez, in the winter of 1879-80, received a message from Colonel Gordon. He had just landed from Suakin, and wished to see me. I found him seat ed in a room at the old Suez hotel, with his black secretary and trusty factorum, Mohammed El Tohamy, and a few friends, including the governor of the Poor Mohammed El Tohamy, who was destined to see his master fall at Khar-tum and probably shared his fate, was looking cold and miserable, and I no-ticed he was sipping some hot mixture of which the aroma did not seem familiar.

On my entering, Gordon exclaimed:
"I have resigned the governor generalship of the Sudan and am returning to England. The khedive's ministers dared to send me instructions, and so I have resigned. Now, tell me honestly, what will the world say of my work in the Sudan after the years I have spent there? What is the apparent re-

I said something to the effect that his name would live and be remembered.

"Aye," he rejoined, "but what visible trace remains of my exile and labor? It is now God's will that I should abandon my task, and there is absolutely nothing to show—nothing for the world to gaze at except"—he added this with a curious smile and pointing to the shivering son of the tropics at the other side of the table—"except, perhaps, that I have taught my Mohammedan secretary to drink hot toddy at 10 in the morn-

Certainly Gordon's work was not in-tended for show. At Alexandria he had an audience with the late khedive, Tewfik Pasha, at which he tendered his resignation, and then, removing his fez, the badge of allegiance, addressed some words of stirring advice to his highness, "as from an independent English gentleman." Before embarking for Enrope Gordon wrote a famous telegram to the khedive—"Mene, Mene, Tekel, Uphar-sin"—which was shown to me and to the correspondent of a great London newspaper, but it is a question whether it was ever dispatched from Malta. In my case, - it was curiously prophetic. any case, it was curiously prophetic. Within two years the Sudan was in open revolt and Egypt under foreign

Both Averse to Interference.

At the corner of Fourth avenue and Smithfield street a lady from Glenwood entered a crowded outgoing car. conductor knew who she was, and that she resided in Glenwood. He suspected that she had made a mistake, and that she thought she was on a Second avenue car, so he crowded up the aisle and politely inquired:

"Where are you going, lady?"
"That's my business," she tartly replied. The conductor said nothing more the car sped along through the dark, crossing the Monongahela through the covered Tenth street bridge and rapidly putting space between it and Glenwood. When it entered the big Knoxville incline elevator and stopped, nobody said a word. After a minute's wait up the precipice it started, leaving the sparkling electric lights far below.

"My goodness," screamed the Glenwood woman to the conductor, "where is this car going?"

"That's my business," dryly replied the conductor. - Pittsburg Dispatch.

Pat Regan had a face on him that, as he had once remarked himself, was an 'offinse to the landscape." Next to his homeliness his poverty was the most conspicuous part of him. An Irish neighbor met him recently, when the following colloquy ensued:

An how are ye, Pat?" "Moighty bad, intoirely. It's shtarvation that's shtarin me in the face."

"Is that so? Sure, an it can't be very pleasant for ayther of yez."-Montana Columbian.

A Patriot's Dinner.

Marion, the American Revolutionary general, once feasted an English officer on sweet potatoes baked in the fire by a darky and served on a strip of bark, with a log for a table. It is said that the officer resigned and went home, saying it was no use to try to conquer people who could live on sweet potatoes

Cans made of paper pulp are being introduced to take the place of tin cans for containing all kinds of preserved products, says the New York Sun. The eccasional cases of poisoning from canned goods are due to the contents be-coming tainted through the cans not be-ing airtight. Many millions of tin cans are used annually by canned goods fac-tories in this country, and such cases of injury from tainted goods are compara-tively rare, but because it is possible, through slight defects in the solder or minute breaks in the caus, for such dan-ger to result, the canners have been looking for a satisfactory substitute for tin. It is believed that this has at last been found in the paper pulp cans. They are oilproof as well as waterproof, will not expand or contract, and will stand as much rough usage in shipment as tin cans, and perhaps more.

Inmates of the House of Correction, when they are discharged from that institution, are usually furnished with a brand new pair of shoes in which to start anew the journey of life. The traders stand outside the gates and wait for these discharged prisoners. The latter are not slow to part with their new shoes in exchange for the old ones offered by the traders, not only because the old shoes are more comfortable, but because there is a money consideration too. The House of Correction shoes are strongly made and command a fair price among workingmen. The traders pay a bounty of about 25 cents, together with the old pair of shoes in exchange for each new pair, and they make money by the deal.—Philadelphia Record.

People who refuse to pay their taxes in Burma are promptly dealt with by the revenue officials. In the Pegu district the local tax collector arrests the defaulting householder and family and carries them off to durance vile in his house until the taxes are forthcoming.
